WHERE THE MILK COMES FROM

A Visit to Our Local Dairies—Remarkable Growth of the Business—Sanitary Conditions Prevail

THE O. K. DAIRY.

Time was and not very long ago that such a thing as a dairy to supply local consumers of milk, was a thing unthought of in Glendale. Dairies on a large scale catering to the Los Angeles market have existed in this portion of the valley for many years, however, notably the Richardson dairy at Tropico, which ran for many years, and the Handorff dairy on the Verdugo Road, where over two hundred cows are kept. About three years ago, Mr. L. E. Elliott, bought a lot and built a house on Louise street near the wash in North Glendale. He had two cows which produced more milk than his family required and so he began to sell to his neighbors without any serious intention of going into the dairy business. Neighbors continued to come into the vicinity, however, and the demand for milk increased proportionately so that Mr. Elliott sort of drifted into the business, adding one or more cows at a time until he now is milking twenty-five. For a while he tried to buy milk of various farmers who had more than they needed for their own use, but it was unsatisfactory, as he could not govern the conditions and management which are essential to uniform good results in the dairy business and without the exercise of which the product falls off in quality so that consumers rapidly withdraw their patronage—there being no monpoly in the business and competition being pretty keen. Most of Mr. Elliott's cows are grade Jerseys. A cow giving four gallons of milk daily is regarded as being fairly satisfactory, but not exceptionally good—this output being for three months or so immediately after the animal comes in fresh and of course gradually diminishing. Dairymen as a rule calculate on giving a cow a rest of two months before calving, putting her out to pasturage during that time, if practicable. Every effort is made to keep the milk clean. Stables and yards are cleaned daily. All cows are dehorned and fed in stanchions, every animal quickly learning its place for feeding and being milked. Mr. Elliott feeds alfalfa almost exclusively, using about a ton a day. The cows are milked twice a day, at 3 a. m. and 3 p. m., the output being about 200 quarts daily. The milk is cooled immediately after being taken from the cows by being strained and passed over an aerator which is kept cool by the water contained in it. After passing over the aerator it passes through a strainer into the bottles which are sealed at once and ready to serve. The wash house is fitted up with hot water boiler and other conveniences for the work done there. Every bottle is thoroughly scalded and cleaned before being used the second time, a rotating brush is arranged to save the trouble of hand washing, and does its work thoroughly.

The MacMullin Dairy

is located on Sycamore street, near the West Glendale school house. Mr. MacMullin had been engaged in the business of an interior decorator in Los Angeles, having been contractor for several big jobs there and was suffering from nerves which were protesting against overwork. He shook off the cares of business for several months, recuperated and concluded to try the dairy business not for the sake of getting rested, strictly speaking, but in order to get into something different. With the able assistance of Mrs. MacMullin he started in fourteen months ago and now is milking 22 cows. He was no novice in the business, however, having had previous experience in the same line, when he reached the limit of 100 cows. He started here with 80 customers and now has 160. He claims that there are thirty lusty babies on his route, all of whom express their appreciation of the product served them. The consumption of alfalfa here is about 100 tons per year, more or less bran being fed with it and in their season, pumpkins, citrons, etc.

Ten of the cows here are Jerseys, 3 Holsteins, 3 Durhams and 6 mixed half Jerseys. Every six weeks a veterinary examines the animals and gives a certificate as to their healthfulness and the general condition of the dairy. The milk here is cooled by simply straining it into a large vessel which is surrounded by cool water, from which it passes through another strainer into the bottles. The intention is to merely cool the milk to atmospheric temperature, mindful of the fact that the most of the consumers do not use ice chests and that the milk will keep longer with them than had it been at first brought to a lower temperature. Even during warm weather milk handled as this is should keep from 18 to 24 hours, provided it is properly cared for by the consumer. The regular proportion of cream expected to rise on the milk in bottles is as follows: pints, 2½ inches, quarts, 3½ inches; this should rise in 12 hours. The same care is shown in washing and caring for the bottles as was noted in the dairy first mentioned; one feature should be noted, however, the bottles hang on the draining rack mouth downward, so that no flies enter them. Milk is an article so generally consumed that it was gratifying to the reporter to find at both dairies visited that the proprietors use every effort to insure its reaching the consumers in a condition of purity.

ALL SHOULD VISIT THE EXPOSITION.

What the Pacific Coast region can do has never been better told than by the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, now in progress at Seattle. One hundred Californians, under the auspices of the California Promotion Committee, and other commercial organizations of California, went to the exposition in a magnificent special train, and they have returned filled with the vast importance of this exposition as an educational factor in the development and upbuilding of the Coast.

What these hundred Californians have seen should be seen by every Californian. The exhibits equal those any exposition ever held, and in addition to having most of the things that have been seen in other expositions there are many that have never been featured before. Every one who visits this exposition cannot fail to return to his home with a higher sentiment of loyalty to his country and a feeling of pride in his own state.

The various government buildings and exhibits are worth going across the continent to see, and the California building and exhibit is unsurpassed by any state exhibit at the Fair.

The men who went with the California Promotion committee, and the committee itself, join in urging a large attendance from California. California is equally interested with Washington in making this exposition a grand success. The exposition merits the attention of every one, and has surpassed the expectations of all who visit it. Every one looks forward every year to an outing, and this year no better outing can be planned than a trip to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, for by doing this you are not only being educated regarding the entire Pacific Coast region, but you are helping California by helping Washington.

CITY TRUSTEES

A Quiet Session—Ordinance Authorizing the Issue of Bonds for Lighting Plant Passes First and Second Reading—Canvass to be Made for Consumers

All present except Mr. Anderson.

Demands as follows were referred to the finance committee:

Annual dues League Cal. Mun.	$10.00
F. W. McIntyre, tax rebate	3.06
Minnie A. Cross, typewriting	2.40
Glendale News, job printing	3.50
C. W. Burkett, inspector's fees	67.27

Demands previously referred to the finance committee were reported back approved.

The monthly report of building inspector for June accompanied by a check for $67.27 for fees collected, was received and filed.

A communication was received from J. F. McIntyre requesting the repayment of double taxes paid on certain property in 1906; referred to tax collector. A communication was received from R. P. Jodon, making application for a position in the electrical department of the municipal lighting system.

An ordinance "Providing for the issuing of bonds of the city in the sum of $60,000 for the acquisition, construction and completion of electric lighting works, etc.," was taken up and passed first and second reading.

The president appointed a committee on the matter of right of way on Brand boulevard for electric railroad, consisting of Messrs. Cole and Blackburn. The city clerk was instructed to prepare a form of application blank for electric light service, same to be approved by city attorney. The president was authorized to employ two canvassers to canvass the city with these application blanks. The clerk was also instructed to procure estimates of cost of a generating plant for an electric lighting system from different companies. It was ordered that permission is given for the celebration of the Fourth of July, 1909, by the use of fireworks from 12 o'clock midnight of July 4th. Trustee Blackburn offered a resolution approving map of the Knott tract and accepting on behalf of the public the avenues, streets, alleys and places shown thereon, which was adopted. The ordinance and judiciary committees were instructed to recommend amendments to the ordinance regulating speed of vehicles. Matter of phones for the fire department was referred to committee on fire and public safety.

REAL ESTATE AND BUILDING.

While the advent of warmer weather of the past week may naturally be followed by something that resembles dullness in the building and realty line, there is no evidence of such a condition yet.

Mr. A. W. Randolph has sold to Messrs. Blanchard, Guiberson and Hanson, his home on Glendale avenue north of Ninth street, and expects to build another house soon on a nearby lot. This is in part trade for some San Joaquin valley property which Mr. Randolph has recently acquired.

Mr. Biren, who recently exchanged a house built by him on Loraine street for Los Angeles property, has returned to Glendale and is building a five-room bungalow on First street west of Central avenue, that will cost about $1500.

Robert Franklin is having built for him on Sycamore avenue, opposite the West Glendale school house, a five-room house which will cost at present about $1500, but is planned to have an addition added on the front which will probably be constructed soon. Mr. Franklin and family will occupy the residence when completed.

The Architectural Building company will construct a six-room residence for Mrs. Ida J. Silverthorne in the Oak Knoll tract. A feature will be a living room 14x25 feet with a stone fireplace; the exterior will be of cedar shingles with heavy oiled timber effect.

Mr. Lynch, city engineer, is subdividing the Knott tract, extending from Third to Fourth streets on Louise—the old-time and familiar lemon orchard.

Mrs. Terrill, Brand boulevard, between Fourth and Fifth streets, is putting up a combined residence and restaurant building, to cost about $1000.

O. S. Palmer is adding $500 worth of improvements to his house at 116 West Sixth street.

The building inspector report for June shows permits issued for the month indicating an expenditure of $15,850 for new buildings and repairs. The toal expenditure for buildings as indicated by permits from January 1st to July 1st, 1909, is $111,846, as against $67,960 for the same period last year. Total number of permits issued since January 1st, 1909, to date, 102.

IMPORTANT CHANGE IN RURAL FREE DELIVERY SERVICE.

Beginning July 1st the free rural delivery will be extended to cover the district bounded by Louise, (north of Doran), Fairview, Woolacott and Sycamore avenue, San Fernando road and Fourth street. The rural delivery carrier, who now starts out from East Los Angeles to deliver on Rural No. 5, will upon the completion of that service daily, come to the Glendale postoffice, obtain the mail for the territory described above and deliver it the same day. Heretofore mail for that section of Glendale had to go from the Glendale postoffice to Los Angeles and thence to Burbank for delivery.

Although officially the designation of this territory for mail purposes is "Rural Route No. 5, Los Angeles," mail addressed to Rural Route No. 5, Glendale, will reach its destination just as promptly.

FATAL GASOLINE ACCIDENT.

A little five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Young of East Sixth street, while working about a gasoline stove engaged in candy making last Monday afternoon, caught fire from the flames of the stove and was so seriously burned that she died on Tuesday evening in a Los Angeles hospital. When the flames caught her clothing she became panic stricken and ran out of the house, but was caught by her mother, who was herself burned painfully in extinguishing the blaze. Drs. Chase of Glendale and Tholen of Tropico were called in and did everything possible for the relief of the little sufferer. On Tuesday the case was turned over to a physician from Los Angeles who took the little victim of the sad affair to a hospital where she died Tuesday evening.

A VICTORY OF MR. FULLER.

Mr. D. E. Fuller of North Glendale is in receipt of notice from his lawyer, E. G. Susemihl, Esq., that the case of Funkhausen vs. Fuller has finally been decided in favor of the defendant. It will be remembered that Mr. Fuller caught a stray horse over a year ago, for which a reward of $25.00 had been offered. The animal belonged to Funkhause, who instead of paying the reward, replevined the animal and brought suit against Mr. Fuller for retaining and trying to conceal the animal. The verdict of the higher court, Judge Hervey, confirms that of the jury that tried the case before Judge Monroe, sitting in Glendale, and gives Mr. Fuller the amount of the reward and $2 for feed of the horse.

AN ARTISTIC DISPLAY.

The windows of the grocery store of Shaver Brothers have been most appropriately and artistically decorated in honor of two important events, by Mr. Cecil E. Shaver, who is an artist in that line of work. One window is given up to patriotic designs. A background of American flags gives emphasis to a design consisting of a shield and flags worked out in red, white and blue sugars, with the legend "July 4th, 1776-1909."

The other window is devoted to ornamentation designed to honor the Elks, consisting of an excellent representation of an elk's head, garnished with flags and the legend "P. O. E.," which is liberally interpreted as being "Best People on Earth."

LOS ANGELES POST OFFICE, GLENDALE BRANCH.

Uncalledfor Letters June 29, 1909.

C. W. Brown,
Mr. Wm. Garbeth,
Max Harris,
Miss Ethel Hotchkiss,
Mr. Paul Lowery,
Mrs. Alice Eliz. McDougal.

Will be sent to the dead letter office July 13, 1909.

POSTMASTER.

THE SIXTH STREET PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATION.

The members are requested to meet at the home of Mrs. Frank Hester, 1023 Maple street, third house east of Brand boulevard, at 2 o'clock, p. m., Thursday, July 8th, to sew for the emergency work. Please bring sewing utensils and any material or clothing you may wish to donate.

BENEFIT FOR EUGENE NOWLAND.

His fellow musicians and theatrical friends in Los Angeles have arranged for a benefit performance for Mr. Eugene Nowland, to be given at the Majestic theater in Los Angeles this evening. The affair will be one of the most enjoyable occasions of the kind that has occurred for a long time.

FOURTH OF JULY TO BE CELEBRATED AT VERDUGO PARK.

This year Glendale, Tropico and vicinity are to have a Fourth of July picnic of their own, with the old-time features which have not yet been entirely outgrown. Verdugo Park, which of late years has not been opened often to the public, has been secured and it is expected that a large number of citizens of this section will take advantage of the opportunity to enjoy a neighborhood picnic. The forenoon will be "go as you please," but at 2 p. m. there will be a program of appropriate exercises, consisting of music, reading of the Declaration of Independence and an oration by Gen. F. C. Prescott. Gen. Prescott is an excellent speaker, having ideas and the skill to express them and our people who hear him will feel that it is worth while. Two or three of the churches and Sunday schools are expected to attend in a body. The affair is to be as informal as possible and everybody is invited. The Boys orchestra will be on hand—there will be free lemonade, games and other attractions.

When you patronize home industry you are indirectly benefitting yourself. In buying flour made by the Pasadena Milling Co. you benefit yourself two fold. You not only keep the money in Southern California but you get bettor value for your outlay.

ANOTHER HIGH SCHOOL BOND ISSUE.

We understand that the trustees of the Glendale Union High School District are contemplating the calling of an election in the near future to vote an additional issue of $15,000 to furnish the building and put the grounds in proper condition. It will be remembered that when the $60,000 issue was voted, it was supposed that the old building and grounds could be sold for about $15,000, which would be sufficient to furnish the new building and ornament the grounds. Although the opinion seemed to be generally accepted that the property should bring $15,000, there has not yet materialized an offer exceeding $10,000. The trustees therefore are up against a difficult proposition—they must either sell the property for less than what is generally considered to be its worth or there must be the additional bond issue. The latter alternative has therefore been resolved upon.

Gee, but it's hot! These last few days have made us realize the fact that the time has come for the outing by the sad sea waves and for lighter clothing. Dig up your summer suits. Don't throw away last season's. Send word to the Glendale Dye Works and they will call for your work. Cleaning, pressing and repairing done neatly and reasonably. Wm. Lewis. Home 832; Sunset 2071.

BOARD OF TRADE FAIR.

Under the management of the Board of Trade, a fair will be held in the old skating rink, Fourth and Glendale avenue, by arrangement with Mr. Sanborn, of the Feed and Fuel Company, on Friday and Saturday of the coming week, July 9th and 10th. It will begin on the evening of Friday, continuing throughout Saturday. The proceeds are for the benefit of the pavilion fund. A great many donations have been received from our local merchants and from Los Angeles concerns which will be sold at the booths presided over by the young ladies of our city. Lunches will be served at all hours and the Glendale band will discourse eloquent music. It is expected that Saturday, the 10th being Elks day, many of the visitors of that fraternity to Los Angeles will find their way out here. Altogether it promises to be a big affair and deserves the patronage of the people.

Come to the Glendale Market, order what you want, then ask the price. They are very low and will please you.

An important addition is being built to the rear of the Watson block, corner of Fourth and Glendale avenue. A room 40 by 20, brick walls and cement floor, will be added to the quarters occupied by Shaver Brothers' grocery. This firm will not only have the additional room, but the room occupied at present will have a ten foot extension made to it when the work is completed, which will make one of the largest store rooms in town. A large room is also to be added to the quarters occupied by Whaley and Fish of the Glendale meat market in the same building. A cement floor will be one of the valuable features of this addition, as the firm is now crowded for room.

Fireworks at the Miradero Pharmacy.

Social and Personal

Mrs. Luella B. Dow, sister of Mr. B. A. Blackburn, arrived in Glendale Monday last for a month's visit.

Miss Ida M. Waite leaves Sunday evening to visit Seattle exposition and a sister, Mrs. Tonk, who lives near there. Miss Waite expects to be absent until September.

Mr. H. B. Lynch, of the city engineer's office made a trip to Anaheim Tuesday last investigating the electric lighting proposition as experienced by that progressive municipality.

Rev. George Eley, who is the rector of the Episcopal church at the growing and progressive city of Corona, preached at St. Mark's last Sunday and performed the baptismal service for two or three infants whose parents he had united in marriage.

Mr. E. F. Keatinge, of the First National bank, is occupying his old place at the cashier's window of that institution after a fortnight at Catalina, where he acquired a ruddy complexion and a good opinion of the merits of the island as a pleasure resort.

Mr. Albert Dow, who has been sojourning at Ocean Park for the past two months, has returned to his home on Kenneth Road. Mr. Dow has acquired a wholesome coat of tan and shows other evidence of having profted by his stay at the seaside.

Mr. and Mrs. Tewesley of Toronto, Canada, arrived in Glendale last week and are at home with their daughter, Mrs. H. E. MacMullin of West Glendale. With her grand parents came the little nine-year-old daughter of Mrs. MacMullin, who has been with them for two years past.

Mr. C. F. Royce, of the San Francisco "Examiner," called at the NEWS office during the past week. Mr. Royce is an old newspaper man, having been formerly connected with the Chicago "Tribune." He has been visiting in Glendale his father, Mr. L. A. Royce, and Dr. and Mrs. R. A. Blackburn, the latter being his sister.

Street Supt. F. R. Sinclair is enjoying a week's leave of absence from his duties. We understand that he is off on the briny deep with that venturesome seaman, Capt. Mock. Both are expected to turn up in the course of time laden with albecore and an inexhaustible supply of fish stories.

Prof. W. G. Tight of the University of Albuquerque, N. M., arrived in Glendale Monday last and will probably spend a week or two in Glendale at this time, probably to take up his residence here permanently in the near future, as he has had the excellent taste to select a Glendale lady for a wife, our townswoman formerly known as Mrs. Mabel L. Hackman.

GLENDALE, CAL., JULY 3, 1909

California's direct primary law has been confirmed by the state supreme court. The people now have a brand new toy in their own hands; the result promises to be interesting, and instructive. But we venture this prediction—the self-seeking politician will fool the voters in the same old way!

We are indebted to Captain James M. Wells for a copy of the "Kalamazoo Gazette" of June 20th, the date immediately preceding the assembling there of the state department of the G. A. R. in that city. The Gazette is in its 74th year, which marks it as a patriarch among the papers of the great West.

A lot of women in London in their efforts to obtain audience with Premier Asquith, have again disgraced themselves and injured the cause to which they pretend they are devoted, by forcible resistance to the police authorities. If any one gets any glory out of the affair, it should be the English policeman, whose patience under most extreme provocation marks him for a model of his kind.

Mrs. Sherman, wife of our vice president, has joined forces with a prominent English society woman to exploit the propaganda of the vegetarians, These women should be watched; they will go into Central Park some fine morning and turn loose the wild animals, and in this they will be assisted by that fine old essayist and naturalist, John Burroughs, who says zoological gardens are no use. Soon the meat eaters will be known only to history as a race that has become extinct, but before that time man will have taken to the woods and climbed a tree.

THE WEATHER.

After a delightfully cool spring, barring three or four days when the thermometer registered over 90, summer now seems to have set in in earnest, but not yet has there been a day when the cool ocean breezes have failed to refresh us with old-time regularity. And the glorious nights are typically Californian. The warmth of the last few days is gratefully received by the green things that delight in the sunshine. Fruits are ripening; corn and melons are making daily noticeable progress toward maturity, the alfalfa fields are putting on a tinge of deeper green and making a more lusty growth. The green has disappeared from the hills, but is the more noticeable in orchards, vineyards and irrigated fields. These are those typical days when

"No price is set on the lavish summer;
June may be had by the poorest comer."

DR. ELIOT'S BOOK LIST.

The Associated Press has thought it worth while to telegraph over the country a "Partial List of a library which is to contain the best works of English literature, especially adapted for the person seeking a general education." Being only a "partial list" it is not worth while to attempt to pass judgment upon it, for Dr. Eliot doubtless has a larger list in reserve. If not, we feel free to remark that with all due respect for his high position as an educator, we believe, that his ideas of a "general education" are not very popular and will be followed by very few people. But here is the list:

Johnson's "Volpone," Beaumont and Fletcher's "The Maid's Tragedy," Webster's "Duchess of Malf," Middleton's "The Changeling," Dryden's "All for Love," Shelly's "Cecil," Browning's "Set on the Escutcheon," Tennyson's "Beckett," Goethe's "Faust," Marlowe's "Dr. Faustus," Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," "Letters of Cicero and Pliny," Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," Burns's "Tam o'Shanter," Walton's "Complete Angler," "Lives of Donne and Herbert," "Autobiography of Saint Augustine," Plutarch's "Lives," Dryden's "Aeneid," Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales," "Imitation of Christ," Dante's "Divine Comedy," Darwin's "Origin of Species," and "Arabian Nights."

MERKETING UNRIPE FRUIT.

A Los Angeles department store advertises three boxes of loganberries for five cents. Many of the loganberries put on the market are not worth more than the price mentioned, because they are picked before they are ripe and are consequently unfit for food. A large proportion of the consumers of our fruits have no real knowledge of them and the dealer can palm off on them anything that he pleases. A loganberry in a proper condition of ripeness is one of the finest products of our gardens, but the bright red berries of this kind that crowd the market are unripe and only tend to bring the fruit into disrepute. The result of offering such fruit for sale is a loss to producer, dealer and consumer.

The same criticism applies to many other fruits which are placed on the market in an unripe condition. An idea prevails very generally among growers and is shared in by many dealers to the effect that fruit must be picked for market before it is quite in an eatable condition; an idea which is to a great extent erroneous, although of course fruit is much easier handled when hard. The result of this marketing of unripe fruit is a greatly diminished demand. The few growers who take extra care to furnish well-ripened fruit, packed in an attractive manner, may not be able to sell such large quantities as they otherwise would, but the extra price they receive makes it as profitable for them in the end. When dealers sell loganberries at two or three cents a box, it is safe to risk something in a wager that they are not worth the money.

THE NATION'S BIRTHDAY.

After having passed safely through the fever of youth and outgrown at least some of the enthusiasm of the years following, the maturer citizen is prone to pronounce anathema upon the noises that once a year break forcefully in upon his everyday routine, and disturb the even tenor of his way. If the celebration of the anniversary of the nation's birthday was left to the citizen last mentioned, the probability is that it would soon cease to be celebrated and become a memory of constantly diminishing freshness. Therefore it is well that the youth of our land see to it that the Fourth of July is not forgotten. It is a mistake to think that the burning of powder and the holes blown in the atmosphere is all a waste of time and money and a useless irritant of tired nerves. There are times when silence is eloquent, but noise certainly appeals with greater force to the mind through the medium of the ear. Perhaps we who have outgrown the love of those features of the celebration which appeal to the senses of youth, do not need to be reminded of the "Days of '76," and as far as we are personally concerned prefer something more safe and sane. But there are and always will be those to whom an appeal can be made most successfully through the medium of the eye and the ear, and as long as such exist, so long will there be sufficient reason for our long established features of the Fourth of July celebration. But while to the maturer mind there may seem to be little need of the noisy features of the day, there is no mind so fully crowded with patriotic memories and no heart so ready to respond to the thrills of patriotic impulse, but that an additional impulse from without may come with rejuvenating power that will bring a benison in its wake. We need to be reminded of the days of '76; of Bunker Hill, Valley Forge and Yorktown. We need to know more of Washington, Franklin, Patrick Henry, Hamilton, Madison, Jefferson and a host of others. We need to be reminded that there were giants in those days; men who in intellect, patriotism and moral worth were among the "foremost in all the files of time" and that with all our twentieth century knowledge we may well afford to look backward and upward to those forefathers of ours who made it possible for us to be what we are and hope to be!

We have one great world-wide holiday at Christmas time and its observance does much to build together the nations of the earth, and it is well that we should have at least once a year a day that is national in its scope, when we rise above the selfish considerations of our state and our own particular neighborhood and realize the fact that we are just a few individuals among many—that we are part of a family of some eighty millions of people; and that our home is not merely a strip of coast along the western shore of the continent, but that it stretches from one ocean to another and we are all one people undivided and indivisible!

PASADENA AND GLENDALE COMPARED.

(By Sidney Dell)

Pasadena sits a queen—in the foothills of the Sierra Madre—overlooking that earthly paradise, the world-famous San Gabriel valley. Who, of all the beau monde, does not know and visit that magical city where vast crowds of millionaires have made their homes to add to the length of their days, because Fame gives it the choicest climate and the most delightful agencies of all Southern California regions?

Its view from an elevation is most entrancing, uniting the picturesque glories of Nature with the prunings of vast wealth. To the south lies the mighty City of the Angels, 12 miles distant, or 40 minutes away, on the banks of the Los Angeles river, in the midst of alternate hill and dale, suggestive of the ancient city on the Tiber that

"Sat upon her seven hills;
And, from her throne of beauty
Ruled the world."

To the southeast, stretching away for 30 miles, the fertile and most lovely San Gabriel valley, redolent with the fragrance of its vast citrus groves and bristling with a glory all its own, presents a scene of rarest charm.

To the north, the granite mountains of the Sierra Madre, whose detritions make the fertile soil of this southland, ranging, in crescent shape, from east to west, seem almost within a stone's throw; lending grandeur to the scene and delight to the climate; where the Mount Lowe trolley takes you a mile into the sky and shows you the grand Pacific, which is shut out from the westerly view on the level by two spurs of that noble mountain. In this world-famed suburb, the refreshing ozone of the ocean mingles its delights with the energizing air of the mountains.

It is truly an earthly paradise; next door to Heaven, in very truth; for the two mountain spurs on the west separate it from Glendale, eight miles away, where Nature is even kinder and where the wealthy people of the world will, ere long, flock to make a still grander suburb for the City of the Angels.

Glendale has all the charms of Nature possessed by Pasadena—and even more. The same commingling of ocean ozone and mountain air, with like glorious climate and enchanting views. She sits a Queen of the Foot Hills, only seven miles distant from Los Angeles, or 20 minutes away from that great center. Her 40-mile view, westward, of the glorious valley of the Los Angeles river, is superior even to that southeastern view from Pasadena. Her valley is equally fertile and extensive, with a companion river to the San Gabriel. Glendale is on a fine elevation upon the eastern slopes of this valley (miscalled the San Fernando) at the base of the Verdugo hills: the undisputed mistress of the scene. Nothing in Nature can be finer or more grateful to the eye than those noble hills. They are not so high and rugged as to be harsh, nor yet so low as to lose grandeur. They are lower than mountains and higher than mere hills: thus giving out a soft, pleasing, indefinable charm to the eye that fascinates every beholder. At the same time they give health and comfort to the resident under their shade, protecting from the less gentle winds that hug the channel of the classic Los Angeles river. These hills constitute the central feature of Glendale's claim of equality, nay primacy, as a suburban city. They also supply an abundance of soft water.

Just a shade of advantage lies with Glendale over the queenly city of Pasadena: in its westerly view, in its unique hills, in its better water, and in its lesser distance from Los Angeles. Then, too, Glendale has not one but many Hotel Raymond sites, and will soon become the tourist center of the world. As Arthur Letts would remark: "Just watch us grow."

One can better realize the VAST VALUE of Glendale's 40-mile view by looking upon Eagle Rock—itself a beautiful suburb—that is shut off from every outlook by the two spurs of the San Gabriel which separate Pasadena from Heaven—from Glendale.

Two features of vast imporance needs must be added to Glendales assets in the comparison with Pasadena. One: the magnificent park of 3500 acres, known as Griffith Park, that towers like a serrated citadel in full broadside view of Glendale; only TWO miles from its western border. Although the LEGAL title to this greatest park in the nation is held by Los Angeles for the PUBLIC yet Nature makes it, in fact, more the property of Glendale than that of the City of the Angels, seven miles distant and having only an END-ON view. The OTHER ASSET is the noble, serpentine, four-mile Eucalyptus Avenue soon to be built along Verdugo Wash "a thing of beauty," winding, in Nature's green, from Verdugo Canyon to the Los Angeles river—a feature destined to make Glendale, as a tourist attraction, outrival Smiley Heights and Magnolia Drive.

"A chain of parks from Griffith Park to Verdugo Park," was the remark made to a GLENDALE NEWS man yesterday by Sidney Dell. "That is the latest phase," he continued, of the move for a storm drain down the Verdugo Wash; and for the resultant double Eucalyptus avenue. One large park at the west and adjoining Griffith Park at the river; one large one at the east end at Glendale avenue on the Ross and Thom ranches, and one or more two-block parks between, would make a chain of parks from Griffith Park to Verdugo Park; for the Verdugo Park owners would at once construct a great boulevard to connect with the Eucalyptus avenue, whereby to attract all the tourists of the world to the greatest scenic feature of Southern California. Judge Ross and Captain Thom would, without doubt, donate a fine park area at Glendale avenue and the west end park could be easily secured by united action. Every large land owner, adjacent, would be deeply interested in fostering the project—of infinite value to them and to all of Greater Glendale. It solves, too, the park problem for our city. The expense of keeping up these? My wife, who dug up this park project, has a plan for that, also. The annual sand deposits at the west end of the drain can be marketed in Los Angeles, furnishing ample revenue for hiring a caretaker and paying all expenses. If we all pull together, Greater Glendale will soon pass Pasadena in the race."

The Asteroids.

Those extraordinary little planetary bodies known as asteroids have formed a most fascinating study to mathematicians and astronomers for more than a hundred years. To the mathematician first, because every astronomical fact must be taken in hand by him to be squared and co-ordinated, as far as possible with every other known fact, and in proportion as it is impossible to account for all the observed phenomena of any particular case, that case becomes so much the more fascinating and interesting, and the asteroids most assuredly hold a foremost position in this class.

The position of the asteroids in the solar system will be seen at a glance from the following table which gives the mean distances of the planets from the sun, in round numbers:

Mercury	36,000,000 miles
Venus	67,000,000 miles
The Earth	92,000,000 miles
Mars	141,000,000 miles
Jupiter	483,000,000 miles
Saturn	886,000,000 miles
Uranus	1,781,000,000 miles
Neptune	2,791,000,000 miles

It will be seen that each planet is nearly double the distance of its next inner neighbor from the sun, but there is an immense gap of 340 million miles between Mars and Jupiter, which up to the commencement of the nineteenth century, so far as was then known, was without planetary occupant. Many and varied were the theories broached to account for this singular void. Kant, the great German philosopher, explained it as due to the overweening size of Jupiter. He considered the zone in which each planet revolved as a great storehouse from which its materials had been derived. If that were the case a definite relation would exist between the planetary masses and the intervals between them. Lambert, on the other hand, sportively suggested that the body or bodies which once occupied a midway position in this portentous gap in the solar system had been swept away by some great comet, and forced to attend it in its wanderings through space.

—In the year 1772 Johann Daniel Titius, a professor at Wittenberg ingeniously established the existence of a remarkable symmetry in the distribution of the bodies constituting the solar system. By a certain series of numbers increasing in regular progression, he showed that the distances of the six known planets from the sun might be represented with a close approach to accuracy. This is popularly known as Bode's Law from the fact that Johann Elert Bode, a professor of Berlin, made it widely known by his writings. But, of course, the term of the series succeeding to that corresponding to the orbit of Mars appeared to be without a planetary representative. The orderly flow of the sequence was thus unaccountably broken. The space where a planet should, according to the "Law," revolve, was, it seemed, unoccupied. But with a firm faith in the truth of his supposed law of distances, Bode hazarded the prediction that the missing planet would be found by diligent search. The discovery of Uranus in 1781, at a distance falling but a little short of perfect conformity with the law, only confirmed this idea, and the result was an energetic scrutiny of the heavens in the quarters most likely to yield results. Von Zach even calculated, in 1785, what he termed "analogical" elements for this unseen, and by any sensible effect or influence, unfelt body. In co-operation with five other German astronomers who met on the 21st of September, 1800, at Lilienthal, Von Zach succeeded in organizing a corps of searchers which he jocularly termed "celestial police," for the express purpose of tracking and intercepting the supposed fugitive subject of the sun. The Zodiac was carefully divided for purposes of scrutiny into twenty-four zones, their apportionment to separate observers was partially effected and the association was rapidly getting into working order, when news arrived that the missing planet had been discovered by Giuseppe Piazzi, an Italian astronomer, who was quite unaware of the detective organization in Germany. The name of Ceres, the tutelary goddess of Sicily, in which island Piazzi lived, was by his request bestowed upon the interesting stranger. About one year later a second small planet, subsequently named "Pallas," was discovered at nearly the same average distance from the sun, and proved to be, beyond question, of a strictly analagous character. As a popular astronomical writer observes, "This result was perplexing in the extreme. The symmetry and simplicity of the planetary scheme appeared fatally compromised by the admission of many, where according to old-fashioned rules, room could be found for only one."

At this juncture Professor Olbers of Bremen came forward with a somewhat startling hypothesis which seemed to explain the enigma. He supposed that Ceres and Pallas were fragments of an ancient planet formerly revolving beyond Mars, which had been disrupted or blown to pieces in the remote past, either by some internal agency or by collision with some comet or other body, and he moreover predicted that many more such fragments would be found circulating in the same region. This prediction was amply justified by the discovery of the two asteroids now known respectively as Juno and Vesta. The first was discovered by Harding in 1804, the second by Olbers himself in 1807. The theory of an exploded planet thus seemed to have everything in its favor. Sir Wm. Herschel termed the little planets "asteroids," and it is found that three of them, at least, conformed with very approximate precision, to Bode's law of distance. The minuteness of these bodies also appeared further to strengthen the idea of fragmentary character. But the strong point of the theory lay not, however, in what it explained, but in what it had predicted. It had been twice confirmed by actual exploration of the skies, and has produced, in the recognition of Vesta, the first recorded instance of the premeditated discovery of a heavenly body.

The theory not only commended itself to popular imagination, but received the sanction of the highest scientific authority. "The great Lagrange bestowed upon it his analytical imprimature, showing that the explosive forces required to produce the supposed catastrophe came well within the bounds of possibility; since a velocity of less than twenty times that of a cannon ball leaving the gun's mouth, would, according to his calculations, have sufficed to launch the asteroidal fragments on their respective courses."

Nevertheless, the hypothesis of Olbers has fallen into disrepute. All the evidence in support of it appeared to have been produced at once and spontaneously, while evidence of a contrary character was only elicited slowly, and as it were, by cross-examination. Coincidences which at first view appeared striking and significant have been swamped by examples of opposite nature, and the origin of this singular group of bodies is as much a puzzle to the astronomers of the twentieth century as it was to those of the nineteenth.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. Dr. Linscott for the International Newspaper Bible Study Club.

July 4th, 1909.

(Copyright, 1909, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

Paul's Second Missionary Journey.

—Antioch to Philippi. Acts xv:36 to xvi:15.

Golden Text—Come over into Macedonia and help us. Acts xvi:9.

Verse 36—Is it generally necessary to follow up any good work which we have commenced if we would make it a success?

Verses 37-39—Would it have been wiser if Barnabas had first consulted Paul in the matter of taking Mark?

Barnabas was a relative of Mark; are we as good judges of the fitness of our relatives for an office as we are of the fitness of others? Why?

Why is nepotism in government appointments, looked upon with suspicion?

Had Paul, probably, good reason for objecting to taking John and Mark with them? (See Acts xiii:13.)

If a man shows lack of courage, or tact, or faithfulness, in one position, does that disqualify him in any measure, from getting another, or from success when in another position?

If both Paul and Barnabas had been duplicates of the man Jesus, would there have been this quarrel between them, and how would the matter likely have been settled? (This question must be answered by members of the club.)

When two Christians fall out, is one or both always to be blamed?

Verses 40-41—Did the dispute between these men work out for good, as it resulted in two missionary deputations instead of one?

By any process of reasoning can you conclude that God was back of this dispute, between these two godly men, so as to better work out his purposes?

Chap. xvi:1-8 — Should ministers, and other Christians, be on the lookout for young men who are fitted for the ministry, the same as business men are for good salesmen?

What can you say for, or against Paul circumcising Timotheus, in view of the decision of the council at Jerusalem? (See Acts xv:1-29.)

In matters of habit, or ceremony, or non-essentials, is it well for us to give way to the views of others, sinking our own preferences when we can accomplish good by so doing? For example, you may oppose wearing "pig-tails" in this country, with wisdom, and yet to refuse to wear one in China may be great folly.

Verses 4-5—What were the "decrees . . . . . of the elders which were at Jerusalem," and are these binding upon the church today? (See Acts xv:28-29.)

Is a church better with or without an elaborate creed?

What did Jesus teach which is not included in righteousness, and the constant vision of God?

Will a church sound "in the faith," always be a magnet to draw others to it?

Verses 6-8—Why did the Holy Spirit forbid them to preach in Asia and Bithynia, and would they have sinned had they done so?

When we are hindered providentially from doing certain good works, is that the Holy Spirit hindering us?

Verses 9-10—How many methods does God adopt in leading us?

Does God in every emergency give us some sure guidance as to what we ought to do?

Was this vision just as clear a call from God, as though he had spoken personally?

Verses 11-12—Does God direct the course of the Christian with absolute certainty, notwithstanding wind or sea?

Verse 13—What is one of the first things an earnest Christian looks out for, when he moves into a new community?

Are women generally in the majority as earnest Christians?

Verse 14—Are busy women generally more spiritual than those who have but little to do?

Should all girls be taught to earn their own living?

Is it easier for God to open the heart of an industrious person than that of an idler?

Verse 15—If a person is inhospitable, or stingy, is that a sure sign of ungodliness?

Lesson for Sunday, July 11th, 1909. Paul's Second Missionary Journey—The Philippian Jailer. Acts xvi:16-40.

The Blushing Tree.

The blushing tree gets its name from the change of hue it assumes when the rain falls on it. As the drops drench the leaves, gradually but unmistakably the green tint gives way to pink. In a few minutes the green fades from sight. Only in a few half hidden spots beneath broad branches and on its trunk is there a tinge of green to be seen. After an hour or more, when the shower is over, the tree assumes its familiar green once more. Certain tiny insects, and not the tree itself, change color. These peculiar parasites are possessed of the power of chameleons. In the warm sunshine they are greener than the tree on which they live, but when the chilly rain falls upon them they contract their tiny backs and become a pretty pink in tint. Millions of these change the entire appearance of the tree and make it seem to be blushing.

THE NUMBER THIRTEEN.

Time Was When It Used to Be Considered Lucky.

Abstract science has done much in brushing away the cobwebs of popular superstition, and abstract science establishes the fact that thirteen in ancient times had quite a different meaning from the thirteen of today. Oriental people found in thirteen something divine and hence something good. Thus it is in the folklore of the Persians, the Indians and Hindoos.

Old Testament Jews were of the same opinion, as Biblical students well know. Thirteen cities were especially dedicated to the priestly tribe; thirteen high priests descended from Aaron; thirteen kings sat in the high council of the ancients; on the 13th day of the month Nisan the preparations for Passover began, and the holy incense consisted of thirteen different odors.

It is well known that all the nations of the old world were in more or less intellectual rapport. The ideas of one tribe descended to the other. But it is certainly interesting to learn that the figure 13 had its sacred and divine meaning also in America of yore among the long since extinct tribes of the Incas and the Aztecs. The inhabitants of Peru counted seven days without any particular name in the week. Their year had seven times fifty-two days, or four times thirteen weeks. The father was compelled to support his illegitimate child to the thirteenth year. The Aztecs had weeks of thirteen days, each with a special name. Their century had fifty-two years, or four times thirteen. Their public archives were of circular form, with a sun in the center of each of the thirteen parts, and thirteen were their tribes.

Dresden a City of Pleasure.

Dresden is essentially a city of pleasure—of fair, wide prospects, of hearty river life, of zest in nature and art. Even the public buildings cluster about the Elbe just as the huts of the first settlers clustered. A circle of Wendish herdsmen's huts on the right bank, a line of fisher shanties on the left—these were the unlikely beginnings of Dresden in the sixth century. But the settlement lay at the only point in the river valley where a ford was practicable, tempting the Germans to settle on the left bank between the Wends and the swamps, or Seen, unlovely places that have long since disappeared, leaving behind only the names Seestrasse, Am See and Seevorstadt. Indeed, the very name of Dresden is derived from the Slavic dresjan, which means "dwellers in the swamp forest."—Robert Haven Schauffler in Century.

Not So Short.

He was supposed to be a poor but otherwise honest young man, while she was admittedly a thing of beauty.

"Will you marry me?" he asked.

"No," she answered.

"You are very short," he muttered.

"Ditto," she replied. "That's why there is nothing doing in the matrimonial line."

"Oh, I don't know," he sneered, as he extracted an obese billbook from an inside pocket and displayed a number of $1,000 bills. "I'm not so short."

Whereupon the unwary maid tried to fall upon his neck, but he gracefully sidestepped, and she fell to the floor in a faint.—Chicago News.

Sure to Respond.

Mother—My other little girl is very frail, but I've taken precautions to have baby grow up into a big, buxom girl. Visitor—Indeed, and what have you done? Mother—I've had her christened "Fairy."—Boston Transcript.

The Sweet Girls.

Maud—You say Jack once proposed to you. I don't believe it. He said I was the only woman he ever loved. Ethel—Yes, dear, but he didn't class me among women. He used to call me his angel.

THE SEPARATION.

Why One Victim Lost Faith In Side Whiskered Brethren.

"Uh-whilst yo' was gone," said Brother Smathers, relating the news to Brother Buckaloo, who had been on a journey, "a gen'leman 'peared on de scene yuh wid de noration dat he was a clarryvoyant and de seventh son o' suppin—I dunnah what—and was gwine to hold a secession in de lodge hall and show signs and wonduhs for de modest sum o' two bits for folks and 10 cents for betwixt sized chil-d'en; po'tly pussonage, wid a striped vest and woolly side whiskers, and 'bout the shade, he was, of de opposite side of a fish."

"Wisht I'd a-been dar," enviously remarked Brother Buckaloo.

"Wisht yo' had, sah, uh-kaze I likes sympathy. "Well-uh, de side whiskered gen'leman took de money at de do', and de house was plumb packed, and den he blowed out de lights and 'nounced in a grizzly voice for everybody to set right still, uh-kaze for de fust spearmint he was uh gwine to whirl in and separate deir souls fum deir bodies."

"Mum-mum-muh Lawd, sah! Did he do it?"

"Not so's yo' could notice it. We dess sot and sot and waited and waited, and bimeby a gamblin' man dat wasn't skeered begun to snawt, and den he lit a light, and, behold, the puh-fessah was gone! He'd done separated us smaht growed folks fum our two bits apiece and de innycent child'en fum deir dimes and was gone fum us. Dat's all dar was to it, 'ceppin' it clinches de sneakin' s'picion I's had for, lo, dese many days dat a nigger wid side whiskers dess natu'ally kain't be right."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

VISITING CARDS.

Names and Messages Used to Be Scribbled on Playing Cards.

It is somewhat curious that so useful an invention as the visiting card should have been unknown to society until comparatively recent times. Yet 150 years ago the carte de visite did not exist. The belles of the seventeenth century used nothing in the shape of a name card, or "ticket," as it was afterward called. Invitations to routs and drums as well as names and addresses were written across the backs of playing cards, which in those days were made with a white reverse and innocent of the intricate pattern familiar to us in modern times.

Mary Wortley Montagu, a lady of ton, says the Connoisseur, would be apt to use a red playing card—a queen of hearts—for ordinary social purposes, while an amorous beau inscribed his name and the most tender of inquiries on the back of a jack of spades. The great world of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries was a small world. It was rigidly exclusive. Living in the same quarter of the town, the quality sent each other scribbled messages by the hand of a favorite page. Society, in a word, was informal in the midst of stately formalities, and we have no difficulty in believing the Comtesse de Boigne when she tells us that in 1800 Lady Harington used to trot up and down Bond street picking up guests for a party for the same night.

Quite Simple.

It is told, no matter on what authority, that a telephone company in Chicago has no end of trouble with its wires. They were continually out of order. Nobody seemed to know why. An investigation was started.

Most of the subscribers in the territory where the trouble was were Poles, Hungarians, Russians, etc. An expert after due consideration of the matter decided that the wires were unable to withstand the onslaughts of languages like Polish, Hungarian, Russian, etc.

"Can you suggest a remedy?" asked the officials of the telephone company.

"Certainly," answered the expert. "Substitute barbed wire."

The suggestion was followed. There was no more trouble.—Philadelphia Ledger.

To Spade It Up or to Plow It?

I am not sure but that the spaded garden has some advantage over the plowed one. The soil can be turned up just where you want it and as you want it by the use of the spade, while the plow works alike throughout the garden, though the soil may vary in depth and nature to a considerable extent. A spaded garden always looks best at the beginning, and looks count in gardening as well as elsewhere. But the gardener who has a liking for neatness will make his garden look well after a little in spite of all obstacles.—"Home Garden," by Eben E. Rexford.

A Courteous Boy.

"Would you rather for your mother or me to whip you?"

"I dislike to show favoritism, father," said little Clarence. "You and mother had better settle the matter between you by flipping a coin."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Would He?

It hardly seems probable that a man should suffer from corns on a wooden leg, but if the leg is made of oak would it not be natural that there should be acorn on it?—London Punch.

A Dear Victory.

"In your little family arguments do you ever succeed in convincing your wife that she is wrong?"

"Yes, but afterward I always deeply regret having done so."

Whatever we conceive clearly we express with ease, and words flow with ease.—Boileau.

FATE OF THE WORLD.

Four Ways In Which Our Planet May Come to an End.

The earth and all its inhabitants are doomed inevitably to destruction, according to Professor Percival Lowell, who declared that one of four possible fates awaits this planet and everything on it. A tramp star might strike the earth, he said, and grind it and its people to powder or ride full tilt into the sun, when the earth's living creatures would be scorched to death. Tidal friction, by its gradually retarding force, might paralyze the earth's motion so that one side of the globe would be eternally baked by the sun and the other side forever frapped. This has already happened to Mercury and Venus.

By the loss of all water and air through depletion or absorption the earth might become a dry, desiccated mummy of a planet, wandering lifelessly through space. Mercury, again, is an example of this, and so is the moon. The most sure death of all, however, as depicted by Professor Lowell, is the decay and freezing of the sun, which is certain to occur some time. When the last flicker is extinct that gigantic ball, bereft of all radiance and warmth, and its retinue of inert, dark tramps, among them the earth, will drift about awaiting collision with some other planetary derelict, which would mean at once destruction and a new birth.—Boston Journal.

VIGOROUS OLD AGE.

Men Who Did Good Work In the Evening of Life.

Enrico Dandolo was not elected doge of Venice until he was eighty-two years old, and he still retained the fire and vigor of his youth. He assaulted and took the city of Constantinople when he was ninety-two years old, himself displaying the gonfalon of St. Mark and animating his followers to the charge. Villars, the French general, in his eighty-fourth year, when crippled with wounds and disease, led a cavalry charge with the same light hearted contempt for danger displayed by him in his youth. The men who won distinction in high command during the mutiny against the English in India in 1857-8 were all of them well advanced in years. Sir Colin Campbell, the commander in chief, was sixty-five; Havelock was sixty-two, Sir Hugh Rose fifty-seven and Sir James Outram fifty-four. They stood the fatigue of field service in a tropical climate, with the thermometer at from 110 degrees to 119 degress in the shade, as well as younger men.—English Magazine.

"Fourteenth" Louis.

It is a singular fact that if you want to recollect the prominent events of the life of Louis XIV. all you have to do is to resolve the dates at which they took place into the figure 14. Thus Louis XIV. became king in 1643 under a regency when five years old; add 1-6-4-3—14. Again, he was born on the fourteenth day of September; count the words "day of September," and you will find them to be fourteen. Again, he became of age at fourteen, the legal age for kings of France. Again, he began his personal government at the death of Mazarin in 1661; add 1-6-6-1—14. Again, he reigned seventy-two years; multiply 7 by 2—14. Again, he died at seventy-seven—add 7-7—14. Again, his father, Louis XIII., died May 14, 1643; add 1-6-4-3—14. His grandfather, Henry IV., died May 14. Louis XIV. died in 1715 and so kept the 14 up even to his death, for add 1-7-1-5—14.

Pretty Good Fishing.

A sportsman was once on the beach at the outlet of a creek in New York state looking for shore birds when he saw a colored boy, who was fishing for perch, lay down his pole at the call of his mother to do some errand. The sportsman put his gun aside and took the cane pole and fished, adding a dozen perch to the boy's string and then sneaked off. Presently a second sportsman, happening that way, asked the boy the usual question and received this answer:

"Yess'r, dey's good fishin' heah. W'en I stop to run to de sto' fo' to get some cawnmeal fo' mam, de perch dey come outen de crick an' jes' strings deyselves awn my string. I don' on'stan' it, but dey's jes' as good fo' breakfas' 's if dey was cotched awn a hook."

A Debtor's Woes.

"The worst thing about owing people," sighed the woman, "is that it seems to give them the right to ask us such personal and impertinent questions about things that really should be none of their business. I never stave off my piano man, for example, that he doesn't ask how it is that I can afford to pay so much rent for my flat."—New York Press.

Disliked the Other Kind.

Philanthropic Caller (with subscription paper)—I shall ask your attention only a moment, sir. Are you a friend of the dumb brutes? Shorty McGinnis—You bet I am! That's why I hate cats, parrots and donkeys.—Chicago Tribune.

The Financial Menagerie.

"Were you a bull or a bear in Wall street?"

"Neither," answered the cautious man. "Not having funds to invest, I was a giraffe. I just rubbernecked."—Washington Star.

Speaking Trumpets.

Alexander the Great is said to have used a speaking trumpet.

To know how to wait is the great secret of success.—De Maitre.

ABSENTMINDED.

A Question the College Professor Could Not Decide Himself.

There is a highly esteemed professor in one of the big colleges who is even more absentminded than most geniuses. His son is a student in the same college. At the beginning of a lecture to his class one morning a look of perplexity overspread the professor's face, and his hearers noted that his thoughts seemed to be wandering from the subject he was discussing. At length he paused for a moment and quietly requested that his son be summoned without delay. The young student, startled by such an unusual message from his father, hastened to him, expecting to find him dead or dying. The professor had not finished his lecture by the time his son arrived and was explaining things in his usual clear and convincing manner. At last he son succeeded in attracting his father's attention, and this extraordinary dialogue took place:

"John, I am surprised," growled the distinguished educator. "What do you mean by interrupting me in this way?"

"Why, father, don't you remember? You sent for me to come at once."

"Oh, yes, to be sure. Now I recollect. It was my fear of annoying your mother. You know how it distresses her, dear soul, if I fail to appear at my meals. I got thinking about this when I started lecturing this morning, and I sent for you to set my doubts at rest. John, please tell me have I had my breakfast yet this morning?"—New York Press.

Not Even the First Step.

Mr. Morse, having bought a new bicycle of the most improved pattern, presented his old one to Dennis Halloran, who did errands and odd jobs for the neighborhood. "You'll find the wheel useful when you're in a hurry, Dennis," he said.

The young Irishman was loud in his thanks, but regarded the wheel doubtfully.

"I mistrust 'twill be a long while befoor I can ride it," he said.

"Why, have you ever tried?" asked Mr. Morse.

"I have," said Dennis gloomily. "A fri'nd lint me the loan o' his whiles he was having the moomps. 'Twas t'ree weeks I had it, an' what wid practicing night an' morning I niver got so I could balance mesilf standing still, let alone riding on it."—Youth's Companion.

A generous arrangement of flags with a lavish display of scarlet flowers attested the patriotism of the Masonic body, together with those of the Eastern Star.

Marjorie Imler recited "Our Flag" and at the close of the festivities all sang "America." Scores were kept on dainty little flags. Mrs. Frank Vesper received the first prize, a handsome Bohemian cut glass bonbon dish. Mr. Thomas Ogg, first prize, a silver back hat brush. Miss Mary Doyle, silver olive fork, as first prize for other games. Mr. Frank Vesper was awarded the consolation prize, which will no doubt adorn the walls of his den at his handsome new home on Lomita Drive, as it is a symbol of a true Mason.

Fruitade and delicious ices were served.

OLD KENTUCKY DINNER.

Mrs. R. S. Hopkins entertained a number of her friends at her home on Glendale avenue, Wednesday afternoon with an old-fashioned Kentucky dinner. With the exception of two ladies, all the guests present were Kentuckians—old friends of the hostesses in the South.

The affair was probably the most stylish of any given at this place for many months, and it proved very enjoyable. During the noon hour each guest was called for and taken to the Hopkins in a carriage and all the pomp of an old-fashioned Kentucky social affair prevailed throughout the afternoon.

At 1 o'clock a five-course dinner was served, the repast having been prepared by an old colored "Mammy," who has been in the employ of Mrs. Hopkins for fifteen years. The dinner was concluded at 4 o'clock, when after some time in conversation the guests were driven to their homes.

The home was charmingly decorated with an abundance of seasonable flowers. In the parlor were many cluster bouquets of La France, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and Jubilee roses prettily supported by many delicate ferns and other greenery. Above the doors and bowing from behind pictures were graceful pepper boughs. In the dining room the table presented a delightful picture. Around the edge of the table was a trailing border of scarlet geraniums and maiden-hair ferns, while above the center hung the pretty chandelier which was abloom with many roses and ferns. Bouquets of various flowers was artistically placed in different sections of the room and pepper boughs were strewn with careless grace so as to give the room the appearance of a bower of roses and greenery.

Dainty little hand-painted place cards, bearing the name of one of the guests, marked each place. Mrs. Hopkins was ably assisted in entertaining by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Robert Hopkins.

The following guests responded to invitations: Mrs. G. Seward, Mrs. E. Pratt, Mrs. K. Erskine, Mrs. W. H. Halleck, Mrs. Hal Davenport, Mrs. Cushing, Miss Elizabeth Cushing, Mrs. Mary Ayers, Mrs. G. C. Wattles, and Mrs. J. E. Hopkins.

TROPICO CHURCH NOTES.

Presbyterian.

By Rev. Henderson C. Shoemaker.

A membership contest was held recently in our Sunday school and Mrs. J. A. Logan's class was awarded a silk banner on which was printed, "Banner Class." And in a money-raising contest which was decided on Children's Day, prizes were given to the following scholars for raising the largest amount of money, to be used for the Sunday school work of this place: First prize, Miss Mary Logan; second prize, Sadie Snell; third prize, Harwood Collins.

The pastor of this church wishes to announce that he has taken possession of his new bungalow at the corner of Blanche avenue and Cypress street. The place will be known as 1141 Cypress street.

Next Sunday morning the pastor will preach from the subject, "Kadish-Barnea." In the evening our church will be visited by the Methodist church of this place. Music for the evening will be furnished by the choirs of both churches, which will unite. The two orchestras will also combine and some excellent music is insured.

Mrs. Edward Henry Weston rendered very sweetly at last Sunday evening's service, "Thy Will Be Done."

Previous to the church service next Sunday evening, the Methodist Epworth League and the Christian Endeavor of this church will unite and the service will be in charge of officials of both societies.

METHODIST.

By Rev. J. H. Henry.

Last Sunday morning, Children's Day was observed and after the regular session of the Sunday school at 9:45, the special program was rendered. When the hour arrived for the opening the church was filled and the program was listened to with marked attention from the beginning to the end. A pleasing number was the recitation by five girls which were trained by Mrs. Charles Peckham. The flag drill under the direction of Mrs. Flora Weston, was very pretty. There were fifteen pupils in the exercise, each carrying a flag, each representing a different country. A collection was taken for the educational fund.

An all-day business meeting of the Ladies' Aid society of this church was held at the home of Mrs. C. C. Chandler on Cypress street, Tuesday.

Mrs. Joseph Marple of this church and Miss Stella Nell of the Christian church of Glendale will render the vocal solos called "Anchored at Last," at the Union service to be held at the Presbyterian church next Sunday evening.

QUEENSBORO BRIDGE.

The Greatest Structure of Its Kind In the World.

Measured by the combined length and capacity of its five main spans, the Queensboro bridge, across the East river from Fifty-ninth street, New York, to Ravenswood, Queens, is the greatest bridge in the world. Including approaches, its total length is 8,600 feet, width 86 feet and greatest height over 300 feet above the water. It crosses from shore to shore, 135 feet above the river, with three enormous spans of 1,182 feet, 630 feet and 984 feet, the middle one reaching across the full width of Blackwell's island. Besides these there are two more great "anchor" spans, one at each end, wholly over dry land, with a length of 3,724 feet for the five, which together contain over 105,000,000 pounds of steel. No other spans in this country, except suspension bridges, approach the longest of these, and the only trussed span in the world which exceeds it is the Forth bridge, which, although 1,710 feet long, has a capacity for only two railroad tracks, less than one-third of this. There are two decks, the lower carrying a wide driveway and four electric car tracks and the upper one two sidewalks and two elevated railroad tracks and having in all an estimated capacity of 200,000,000 car passengers and millions of vehicles and pedestrians annually. It cost over $20,000,000.—Exchange.

RULE OF THE SEA.

Old Whaling Law Applied to a Twice Caught Cod.

That etiquette is observed among the fishermen that journey to the fishing banks was discovered by an amateur angler on his first trip.

The amateur hooked a codfish, but his line parted just as the fish was above the water. Back fell the codfish, carrying with him two sinkers and the hook.

Twenty minutes later another angler cried out that he had captured a cod with two sinkers and a hook. The amateur went up to the angler, who appeared to be an old salt, and asked for his hook and sinkers, which had his name stamped on them. He was surprised when the old salt told him to take the fish also.

According to the rules generally followed on the fishing boats, the second angler was entitled to the fish, but the hooks and sinkers should be returned to their owner. The old angler explained why he wanted to give up the fish.

It seems that he had followed the sea a great part of his life. When a young man he was a whaler, and, according to whaling law, a dead whale belongs to the ship whose name appears on the harpoon that killed it. Therefore the old salt figured that the amateur owned the codfish he had taken.—New York Sun.

Euler's Wonderful Memory.

Leonhard Euler, who was born in 1707 and died in 1783 at St. Petersburg, where he spent his life as a teacher of great power and as a prolific writer, was an instance of the genuine mathematician endowed with almost superhuman powers. He left more than 200 manuscript treatises on his favorite subject, and the bulk of the works published by his academy between 1727 and 1783 were from his pen. In his old age he was totally blind. Then he carried in his memory a table of the first six powers of the "series of natural numbers up to 100."

It is related that on one occasion two of Euler's students attempted to calculate a converging series. As they advanced they found they disagreed in the result by a unit in the fifteenth figure. The question was referred to Euler, who decided to make the calculation. He did this mentally, and his result was found to be correct.—New York Tribune.

The Codmoppe.

Herrings are still eaten as much as in the days when Yarmouth had to send a hundred yearly to the king, baked in four and twenty pasties. But where is the codmoppe gone, and what was it like when kings dined off it in Lent? "Codmoppe sauce Hollandaise" would sound most intriguing on a Savoy menu. More original still would be the "rostid perpes" of a Henry V. banquet, which was the "sea swine" of the unrefined Saxon, the "porco marino" of the mediaeval ecclesiast. A maister coke gives an early receipt for "puddyng of purpasse," another teaches how to "salte porpyesse and seele," another how to "undertraunche that purpos." From which it may be seen that enterprise extended also to the spelling of the porpoise.—London Chronicle.

Candymakers' Tricks.

An Atchison man went into a candy factory. He was surprised to see one of the candymakers reach with his bare hand into a pot of boiling candy. He brought out a handful of the boiling fluid. He was testing its consistency. He first put his hand in a pail of water. After he had jerked out his hand he put it back in the water. The Atchison man tried the same thing and did it without getting burned.—Atchison Globe.

Another Boring Question.

"I say, pa, is a man from Poland called a Pole?"

"Yes, my son."

"Then, pa, why isn't a man from Holland called a Hole?"—Comic Cuts.

Insult Added.

Big Man (with a grouch)—Will you be so kind as to get off my feet? Little Man (with a bundle)—I'll try, sir. Is it much of a walk?—Cleveland Leader.
